Evidence and Explanation of Presidential Search Experience

Ramiro Consulting was formed to meet a specific market demand: there are currently no other academic executive search firms which understand the need for higher education to transition from its current state of politicization toward a restoration of its traditional role of developing basic skills, competence, and civic education. Our consultants are well-known senior academics with decades of experience in America's top universities. They have played significant roles in hiring at all levels within university systems. Our comparative advantage is simple: we understand the need to shift the direction of higher education, possess a vast knowledge of academic personnel, and have a unique capacity to vet candidates based on their commitments, written scholarship, public statements, and past management performance.

Timeline to Perform Presidential Search

Upon being notified of our selection as the preferred search firm on May 31:

- June 15: Consultation with Board of Trustees concerning their criteria for candidate selection
- July 1: Call for applications and outreach to candidates
- August 15: Review applications and interview and vet top candidates
- September 1: Deliver list of top candidates to the Search Committee

Proposed Process to Perform Presidential Search

Within two weeks of securing the contract, our principals and consultants will meet with the Search Committee members to discuss in detail their vision, criteria, and desires. Based on this information, within the following 30 days, Ramiro Consulting will create an opportunity packet and advertisement for the position. We will then conduct a call for applications, to be advertised in leading academic journals and their websites. In addition, during the open applications period, our consultants will conduct outreach to potential candidates within our vast network. Upon the completion of the open application period, our consultants will vet then interview top candidates. A list of select candidates will be given to the Search Committee by the September 1st deadline.
